There is nothing to reconcile, just to let go and find a way to live on without him in the world – when the time comes and that time is not RIGHT NOW, but it could be next week or next year. Do all you can for him while he is alive so you will not have to deal with everything I am dealing with on top of the grief and sorrow because I was not patient, compassionate, understanding, empathetic, apathetic, respectful and loving that last year and two months I had to make up what I had messed up with my mother all of those past years. The extensive topics you have included here on this website are so useful with coping and understanding my anticipatory grief. The mental gash scabbed up and healed properly. I am a very private person and this form of communication works best for me. That is an outstanding compilation!
