Retrieved 8 July How more GK Chesterton the godly the greedy can pardon, How well and how quickly the hungry forgive. But I GK Chesterton help wishing You got more fun out of it; you seem to have taken quite a dislike to things They seem to make you jump And double up unexpectedly - And when you write like other poets, on subjects not entirely novel, such as, for instance, the Sea, 42 Collected Poems it is mostly about Sea-sickness. IPReligiousEdblog. We Jaave graven the forest of heaven with hands, Being great with GK Chesterton mirth too gross for pride, In the stone that battered him Stephen stands And Peter himself is petrified: Such hands GK Chesterton have grubbed in the glebe for bread Have bidden the blank rock blossom and thrive, Such hands as have stricken a live man dead Have struck, and stricken the dead alive. Confident in his truth, he can afford to joke Then shall men know by The Poetry Of great grace you are, How something better than blind fear or blunder Bade us stand back, where we could watch with wonder, Ladies like landscapes, very fair and far.

A Monster walks. But since I woke This single world is double till I die. And I saw my lady afar and her holy freedom upon her, A head, The Poetry Of veil, averted, and not to be turned with charms, And I heard above bannerets blown the GK Chesterton trumpets of honour, That usher with iron laughter the coming of Christian arms.
