A former high school teacher in the Mississippi Delta noted that students might accumulate a number of licks: "Say they had 30 licks, they could choose 10 today, 10 more the next day. As analyzed later in this report, international human rights standards state that the use of force against students is only permissible as a restraint in exceptional circumstances, and even then only to a minimal degree. They'dpopheronthehand. One, it felt a little unjustified-just for being late? Parents find that they have few, if any, methods of redress when their children are beaten. One, it felt a little unjustified-just for being late? Even in cases where students show that beatings can damage the trust between educator and student, corrode the educational environment, and leave the student unable to learn effectively, making it more likely he
