Project goal: This is a statement of the overall aim of the project. The main purpose is to explore the problem-solving process combines cognitive, emotional, and motivational aspects, particularly in high-stakes situations. To reduce that complexity to a one-hour lab activity on a random Friday afternoon puts it out of context and does not address the core issues of Problem Solving CPS.

At school, sketching or drawing was not necessary in most cases; it only took time if a student referred to reading about mathematics when explaining shifts.
